

“Holy crap. This guy looks more like the killer than this guy,” says Billy Coleman, a representative for the Phoenix Law Enforcement Association.

Introducing the three year cover up of a nearly 300 page police investigation of Baseline suspect Terry Wayne Smith by County Attorney Andrew Thomas, lead detectives Alex Fermentia and Mike Polumbo, and State prosecutors Susan Cohen and William Clayton

“I firmly believe that they were covering this up,” says Billy Coleman.

The Times obtained a copy of this investigation through a credible Phoenix police insider. The information contained in the report has been researched through official police reports and numerous interviews with officers, detectives and attorneys. The circumstantial evidence detailed in the nearly 300 pages of the report reveals possible holes in the Baseline Killer investigation and brings to light shocking allegations of police misconduct in its highest ranks.

Read the entire article by Shanna Hogan. PDF HTML